

Tera Patrick

Biography

Tera Patrick is an adult-entertainment superstar whose movies and official Web site (www.clubtera.com) have millions of fans around the world. She has won numerous awards, including Adult Video News' best tease performance for "Island Fever" and best new starlet in 2001. Patrick is the only person to simultaneously grace the covers of Playboy and Penthouse, and she is the first adult-entertainment star to be on the cover of FHM, which gave her the honor for its July 2006 issue. She has also been named top adult actress by Genesis magazine for two years in a row, and was a host of Playboy TV's popular series "Night Calls: 411." Patrick and her husband, musician/actor Evan Seinfeld, operate the adult-entertainment production company TeraVision, which co-produces her movies with Vivid Entertainment Group. Married since 2004, the husband-and-wife team has appeared in several adult films together, including "Reign of Tera," "Desperate" and "Tera, Tera, Tera." TeraVision has also partnered with Hustler TV to exclusively distribute TeraVision movies to pay-per-view and video-on-demand services. Earlier this year, Seinfeld and Patrick launched the Tera Patrick Agency, a talent and management firm for adult-entertainment actors and actresses. Patrick and Seinfeld can also be seen in ThinkFilms' 2006 documentary "Fuck," which examines the impact of the "f" word on society.

Evan Seinfeld

Biography

Evan Seinfeld catapulted to stardom in the early '90s as the lead singer and vocalist of the heavy metal band Biohazard, whose hit albums include "Urban Discipline," "Means to an End," and "State of the World Address." Since then, he has become an actor with credits that include the role of Jaz Hoyt on the HBO prison drama "Oz," which was on the air from 1997 to 2003, and starring roles in the adult films "Reign of Tera," "Desperate" and "Tera, Tera, Tera." Seinfeld is an influential player in the adult entertainment world as an actor, director and manager of adult entertainment superstar Tera Patrick, whom he married in 2004. Seinfeld and Patrick operate the adult-entertainment production company TeraVision, which co-produces her movies with Vivid Entertainment Group. TeraVision has also partnered with Hustler TV to exclusively distribute TeraVision movies to pay-per-view and video-on-demand services. Earlier this year, Seinfeld and Patrick launched the Tera Patrick Agency, a talent and management firm for adult-entertainment actors and actresses. Seinfeld is a member of the all-star band Damnocracy with Ted Nugent, Sebastian Bach, Scott Ian of Anthrax, and Jason Bonham. Damnocracy starred in the VH1 reality show "Supergroup," which debuted this year. Seinfeld and Patrick can also be seen in ThinkFilms' 2006 documentary "Fuck," which examines the impact of the "f" word on society.